

Market Intelligence Report: Birmingham, Alabama

Even with travel down and convention bookings dropping in the shaky economy, Birmingham has over $200 million in proposed hotels for the City Center and myriad new developments to help drive demand once the market rebounds

Heidi Nielsen, Associate

HVS CONSULTING AND VALUATION SERVICES ATLANTA

2386 Clower Street
Suite C101
Snellville, GA 30078
United States of America
Tel: 678.639.3334
Fax: 678.639.3335
<http://www.hvs.com/Offices/Atlanta>

March 2009

NORTH AMERICA - Atlanta | Boston | Boulder | Chicago | Dallas | Denver | Mexico City | Miami | New York | Newport, RI | San Francisco | Toronto | Vancouver | Washington, D.C. | EUROPE - Athens | London | Madrid | Moscow | ASIA - Beijing | Hong Kong | Mumbai | New Delhi | Shanghai | Singapore | SOUTH AMERICA - Buenos Aires | São Paulo | MIDDLE EAST - Dubai

Market Intelligence Report: Birmingham, Alabama

Birmingham has been a crucible for change since its incorporation in 1871. From frailty following the Wall Street crash of 1873 and an outbreak of cholera to the industrial strength of iron and steel production; from racial riots to some of the greatest achievements of the civil rights movement; and from an industrial city in decline to one of the most diverse cultural and economic centers in the Southeast, Birmingham has earned its “Magic City” sobriquet.

Birmingham is in the midst of another evolution, one that the Convention and Visitors Bureau is characterizing with the moniker “The Diverse City.” This diversity extends to the collection of business enterprises, the offerings Downtown, the expansions of the convention center and the Entertainment District, and new and proposed hotels. Despite the economic downturn that has affected the national economy since late 2008, most projects are still moving forward, and the outlook for the City Center is better than would be expected given these challenging economic times. This article looks at how these are coming into concert in Birmingham’s City Center.

Business and Industry

Neighboring deposits of iron ore, coal, and limestone — the composite elements of steel —served as the foundation for Birmingham’s emergence as a center of industry in the late 19th century. Today, Birmingham has transformed into one of the most important business centers in the Southeast and one of the largest banking centers in the U.S. One Fortune 500 company (Regions Financial Corporation) and five Fortune 1,000 companies call the city home. Birmingham also boasts a strong medical and research industry, with facilities such as the University of Alabama Medical Center and the Southern Research Institute gaining national prominence.

The banking industry, though having taken a heavy hit in late 2008, seems to be recovering. The Birmingham News reports that strong gains in the banking industry are responsible for soaring Alabama stocks in early March of 2009.¹ Amid bank closures nationwide, Regions Bank represents a strong anchor for the city’s banking industry. In February of 2009, Regions Bank agreed to assume all deposits (approximately $279.0 million) from FirstBank Financial Services in McDonough, Georgia, which was closed the same month.² Back in August of 2008, Regions Bank assumed some $974.0 million in deposits from Integrity Bank in Alpharetta, Georgia.³

¹ <http://www.al.com/business/birminghamnews/news.ssf?/base/business/1237104951309920.xml&coll=2>

The City Center

Birmingham's City Center extends from the Birmingham-Jefferson Convention Center to Five Points South and from Interstate 65 to the Red Mountain Expressway. As the heart of Birmingham, the City Center owes much of its ongoing revitalization to the efforts of Operation New Birmingham (ONB), a public-private partnership funded by the business community and the City of Birmingham with support from Jefferson County.

In 2004, ONB introduced a five-year plan called Implementation Now, which proposes 13 goals on the way to revitalizing the City Center. Key points include:

- Developing the service industry and new venues to draw people Downtown;
- Renovating the "12 Most Wanted," referring to the largest vacant buildings in the City Center (progress is underway on nine);
- Reducing the number of vacant structures;
- Developing the Railroad Reservation Park and establishing other green spaces;
- Supporting the expansion of the University of Alabama at Birmingham;
- Adding 2,500 new condominiums and apartments by the end of 2009;
- Expanding healthcare centers;
- Sponsoring special events;
- Restoring the historic Lyric Theatre;
- Addressing homeless issues; and
- Increasing promotional efforts and outreach.

Such is the framework of a plan to draw more tourists and residents to a safer, more vivacious Downtown.⁴ Special emphasis is on the Five Points South district, with print and online advertising highlighting bars, restaurants, and attractions in the area.

² <http://www.fdic.gov/BANK/HISTORICAL/BANK/index.html>

³ <http://www.fdic.gov/BANK/HISTORICAL/BANK/2008/index.html>

⁴ "Development Update." Operation New Birmingham, June 2008.
<http://www.informationbirmingham.com/planning/masterplanupdate.pdf>

Due to the economic downturn, some projects associated with the ambitious Implementation Now plan have temporarily stalled. The restoration of the Lyric Theatre, for example, has been placed on hold. Despite the city's economic setbacks, Corporate Realty's $35-million retail-residential project is still underway along with many others, and ONB is estimating that the City Center's resident population will stand at around 4,000 by the end of 2010.

To achieve the goals set forward in the Implementation Now master plan, ONB has overseen several major projects, including the introduction and expansion of several districts. The Entrepreneurial District is anchored by Innovation Depot, a $17-million emerging business center. The Theater District comprises institutions dedicated to entertainment, education, and the arts, including the historic Lyric Theatre, the McWane Science Center and IMAX Theater, the Carver Performing Arts Center/Alabama Jazz Hall of Fame, and historic Masonic halls and other architectural icons.

ONB plans to promote and expand the Entrepreneurial District and develop a concentration of technology-related businesses along First and Second Avenues North. The Railroad Reservation Park, another major project, connects the University of Alabama at Birmingham and the medical complex to the Central Business District. The park, set for completion in early 2010, will serve as a "seam" to fasten the residential, commercial, and entertainment elements of the City Center with 14 acres of green space.⁵ More restaurants, residential housing, and entertainment venues are also planned for the Entertainment District.

Office Tenancy, the University, and the Convention Center

Occupancy for the City Center's expanding office market stood at nearly 93% as of fourth-quarter 2008.⁶ Several developments have made this possible, including the law firm of Balch & Bingham leasing over 100,000 square feet in the Regions-Harbert Plaza Building. The former Regions Tower Building was sold and will be renovated into a Marriott Renaissance hotel.

Several hotels have been proposed for sites proximate to the University of Alabama at Birmingham (UAB) and university-associated medical facilities. A Women's and Infants Hospital, which will be linked to the main UAB Hospital and the nearby Children's Hospital, is currently under development. The Children's Hospital is also undergoing expansion.⁷ UAB, whose medical research and natural sciences programs enjoy high renown, has an annual economic impact of more than $3 billion on the Birmingham area. An extended-stay hotel (the proposed Residence Inn by Marriott) and other limited-service hotels in this area will likely be heavily utilized by the visitors to the University facilities.

⁵ Ibid.

⁶ "City Center Class A B Office Market Survey." Operation New Birmingham, December 2008.

⁷ "2008 Economic Analysis and Inventory of Development Projects." The Birmingham Regional Chamber of Commerce.

The Birmingham-Jefferson Convention Complex (BJCC) sits at the hub of the Entertainment District. The BJCC reported more than 1.7 million attendees in 2007, and events already booked for 2009 include such high-profile acts as Celine Dion, The Eagles, and the Riverdance troupe's "farewell performance."⁸ While 2008 figures were not yet available, anecdotal evidence indicates that attendance took a hit in late 2008 and will remain soft through 2009, as bookings around the nation are trending downward.

The BJCC is connected to the 770-room Sheraton hotel, which recently underwent a multi-million-dollar renovation to more elegantly accommodate convention center delegates. Nonetheless, one factor seems to keep the convention complex from its full potential—an under-supply of hotel rooms to meet the facility's demand.

New Hotels

Over $200 million in new hotel developments have been proposed for the City Center; two of these projects are adjacent to the BJCC and the others are within walking distance. The proposed projects are summarized in the following table.

Proposed Hotel	Number of Rooms	Estimated Opening Date	Developer	Development Stage
Residence Inn by Marriott	129	Summer 2009	The Clarkson Group	Under Construction
Hyatt Place	150	Summer 2009	Corporate Realty Associates Performa	Under Construction
Proposed BJCC Hotel	120	Fall 2010	Entertainment, Inc.	Early Development
Proposed BJCC Hotel	160	Fall 2010	Entertainment, Inc.	Early Development
Proposed Old Federal Reserve Site (4-star)	236	1st Quarter 2011	Melaver, Inc.	Early Development
Holiday Inn Express	100	4th Quarter 2010	Local Developer	Early Development

⁸ www.bjcc.org

Marriott Renaissance (4-star)	280	4th Quarter 2009	Harbert Realty, Concord Hospitality	Early Development
Historic AG Gaston Hotel	Unknown	Unknown	The Roberts Companies	Rumored
Proposed Old Parisian Warehouse Site	Unknown	Unknown	Shinsegae	Rumored
Proposed Hotel	300	Unknown	Franklin Haney	Rumored

The development of these hotels is expected to increase visitation to the City Center and bookings at the BJCC, prompting plans for a renovation of existing facilities and the construction of a new 65,000-seat multi-purpose center, which is expected to break ground in 2010.⁹

Several existing Downtown hotels have undergone major renovations over the last two years, including the transformation of the former Tutwiler Hotel into a Hampton Inn, and the restoration of a relic of the Jazz Age, the historic Redmont Hotel & Residences. The introduction of upscale properties can be expected to boost average rates for City Center hotels and help promote a safer and more attractive Downtown.

Conclusion

Operation New Birmingham's overarching goal is to bring business travelers and other visitors to Downtown Birmingham. According to the organization's President, Michael Calvert, public and private investments in Downtown projects came close to $1 billion as of the end of 2008. CAP – City Action Partnership – has patrolled a 96-block area of Downtown since 1996. Since its implementation, crime has dropped 62% in the CAP District. Residential and commercial growth in Birmingham's City Center thus appears to be on track, and the city is expecting the new businesses, restaurants, entertainment venues, and the expansion of the convention center to create more room nights for local hotels. While Birmingham has some unique difficulties to overcome in the face of the national fiscal crisis, these positive strides put a more hospitable horizon within reach.

⁹ "Development Update." Operation New Birmingham, June 2008.
<http://www.informationbirmingham.com/planning/masterplanupdate.pdf>

About the Author

Heidi Nielsen is an Associate with the HVS Atlanta office. Heidi earned her bachelor's degree from the College of Charleston and has front-line hotel experience with The Sanctuary at Kiawah Island Golf Resort. This hotel operations experience allows Heidi to provide a level of insight and expertise critical to the hotel appraisal or consulting assignment. As an Associate, Heidi oversees and executes site inspections, analysis, and report preparation for our valued clients.

© 2009 HVS. All rights reserved.

Published by:
HVS Atlanta
2386 Clower Street
Suite C101
Snellville, GA, 30078
Phone: 678.628.6577
Fax: 678.639.3335

For further information please contact:

Heidi Nielsen – hnielsen@hvs.com

or visit our website at: www.hvs.com